

TERROR IN THE HARBOUR

The year is 1917. Penny and her little sisters, Emily and Maggie, live with their father in a small house in Halifax. The girls' mother died giving birth to Maggie the year before. Her father, a building contractor, struggles with the challenges of raising three daughters, and plans to send Penny off to Montreal to live with her grandmother and aunt, in the belief that she would be better off raised by women - a notion...

Reader's Opinions

Penny is responsible for her younger sisters since their mother's death a year ago. An ordinary day of trying to get the girls ready in the morning and still get to school on time turns drastic. Two ships in the Halifax harbour collide causing an explosion and destroying the city. The girls and many others have to fight to survive....

Enjoying this series on Canadian girls in history.
