Peek Inside the Book

The morning sun was a grinning, red-toothed warrior, come to slay the night. Bloody and quick, it tore through the night-riding clouds sitting on the purplish, rolling sea and flung a silver-white spear across Melagi, abruptly turning the great volcano that dominated the island from gray shadow to the color of bright jade. The night-wet air convulsed in the sudden heat. Steam boiled from the winding jungle hollows like hot smoke, and the feathery leaves of orchids, sitting in the crooks of giant, sodden trees, shook as if...

This review has been hidden because it contains spoilers. To view it, click here. The second of the Josh Thurlow books. I enjoyed this one, even though I didn't really go much for some of the parts where he includes historical characters as younger people (JFK, Nixon, Michener, etc.). The roles could have been as easily played by someone...
