

CURTAIN CALL

On a sultry afternoon in the summer of 1936 a woman accidentally interrupts an attempted murder in a London hotel room. Nina Land, a West End actress, faces a dilemma: she's not supposed to be at the hotel in the first place, and certainly not with a married man. But once it becomes apparent that she may have seen...

Reader's Opinions

Set in London's theatre district in the 1930s against the backdrop of Oswald Moseley's Blackshirts and other historical moments of importance (the burning of Crystal Palace) this is much more a historical novel than a crime mystery. The murders are in the news, but do not affect the cast of...

From BBC radio 4 - Book at Bedtime: On a sultry afternoon in the summer of 1936, a woman accidentally interrupts an attempted murder in a London hotel room. Nina Land, a West End actress, faces a dilemma. She's not supposed to be at the hotel in the first place, and certainly not with a married man - the celebrated portrait artist, Stephen...
